TOKYO, June 26.—High ranking officers of the Japanese navy were hurriedly summoned to duty at the Kamchatka naval base today as the possibility mounted of a showdown with Soviet Russia over outer Mongolia and fishery rights in northern waters.

The war office announced that Japanese troops in Manchukuo are determined and fully prepared to repulse any further violations of the border.

PA NEW OBSERVES

Golf courses and swimming holes drew their share of attention Sunday, the weather being ideal. According to Manager Walter S. Hart, of the municipal course, Sylvan Heights, the course had its biggest play of the year Sunday.

Street and building decorations which had been put up for the Moose convention, were quickly removed after the close of the convention on Saturday night. Sunday afternoon the streets and buildings were again normal.

The highway marking sign on the southeast corner of the public square would be much improved if cleaned up. Likewise it is out of plumb.

West Pittsburg certainly turns out a huge crowd for the Sunday afternoon baseball games, it is evident from a look at the crowd of yesterday.

There are a lot of wheat fields around the county that seem to be about ready for harvesting. Hay harvest, by the way, is well under way on many farms.

Local bass fishermen are getting their equipment in shape for the opening of the season. Indications are that the bass fishing will be excellent this summer.

There was quite a noticeable halo about the sun this morning, which was called to the attention of Pa New by Mrs. James C. Pherson, of Chestnut street, and several other persons. These halos are caused by particles of ice in the upper atmosphere, students of the heavens assert. The one this morning was quite extensive in area.

At 2 o'clock this morning, a much agitated man dashed into the Dewberry gasoline station on the Youngstown road, stating that he had seen a big bear near Parktown corners, and that he wanted to call up the state police, to notify them about it, which he did. Soon afterwards, several other persons came to the station and reported seeing the bear.

International Situation Developments Of Day

(International News Service)
Great Britain today prepared to retaliate against Japanese treaty violations in the Far East as the public stripping of a British woman subject in Tientsin heightened Anglo-Japanese tension.

Weekend speeches by Chancellor Hitler and lieutenants indicated Nazi-Fascist scorn for British lethargy in reaching to Japanese insults.

French Foreign Minister Bonnet appealed to the United States to declare American adherence to Anglo-French policy and so dispel the "war spectre".

The situation in miniature:
LONDON: Britain prepared to enforce economic sanctions against Japan unless Japan replies to past protests by Wednesday.

TIENTSIN: Two Britons, man and wife, were forced to strip in public by Japanese sentries at the concession barricades.

TOKYO: The Japanese government awaited a full report from Tientsin before replying to British demarches.

PARIS: Foreign Minister of France Bonnet stated that America holds the key to peace or war, and urged that Washington declare itself in agreement with England and France.

SOFIA: The anti-communist powers labored behind the scenes to detach Bulgaria from allegiance to Rumania, Greece and the latter's continental backers, Britain and France.

Police Hunt Resigned Head Of University At Baton Rouge, La.

BATON ROUGE, La., June 26.—One of the mightiest political machines ever carved in this nation—that of the late Senator Huey P. Long—showed signs of crumbling today as sharp-eyed state police went on the hunt for Dr. James Monroe Smith, resigned president of Louisiana State University.

The state police, founded by the late Huey Long as a "protective body" for himself and his lieutenants, were called last night to trace down Dr. Smith after Attorney General David Ellison announced he had found startling irregularities in the financial affairs of the university.

Governor Defers Resignation
The order to the state police was to arrest Dr. Smith "on sight" and return him to Baton Rouge to be held for the session of a special grand jury called to consider the alleged shortage in the funds of the university, said to be in excess of several hundred thousand dollars.

So serious was this sudden turn in the affairs of Louisiana's tumultuous politics that Gov. Richard V. Leche cancelled his plans to resign at 11 a. m. today and instead announced he would remain as chief.

No Warm Enthusiasm For New Program Of President Roosevelt

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, June 26.—Completing a quiet and thorough check-up, administration leaders in cooperation with the Democratic support for President Roosevelt's new $3,860,000,000 lending program was only lukewarm.

This coolness, it was learned, extended to Vice President John Nance Garner.

While Roosevelt forces rushed legislative preparations to put the big pump priming drive into effect, the vice president exhibited to friends a newly compiled record of his thirty odd years in congress, and pointed out where page after page listed speeches advocating economy. Officially, he kept strictly outside the controversy already raging over Mr. Roosevelt's newest proposal to speed the wheels of commerce and industry.

Chamberlain Tells Japan To Cease Mistreatment Of All British Subjects

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff

LONDON, June 26.—In the face of mounting public indignation, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain appealed again to the civilian government of Japan today to put an end to the mistreatment of British residents of Tientsin.

There is reason to hope, he told the House of Commons, that discussions now under way in Tokyo between British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie and Japanese Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita "may lead to a settlement".

Mistreatment Must Cease
The prime minister reiterated that mistreatment of British nationals by Japanese soldiers "must cease", but he told the house he was anxious to say nothing likely to prejudice the prospects of satisfactory Anglo-Japanese discussions.

Hugh Dalton, Laborite, swung the debate away from China. He asked Chamberlain whether he was aware that differences between Britain and Soviet Russia regarding conclusion of an anti-aggression pact are causing great satisfaction in Berlin, increasing the risk of new German aggression and a general war in Europe.

"That may be so," the prime minister said, "and I hope it is in the minds of the Soviet government also."

Chamberlain gave no indication of any concrete progress in the negotiations, but said he was hopeful that new instructions could soon be sent to Sir William Seeds, British ambassador in Moscow, that might accelerate them.

HARRISBURG, June 26.—Defense counsel today planned to ask a new trial for Roy E. Brownmiller, former secretary of highways, who was convicted on two counts of a $1,000,000 payroll padding of highway department forces to aid the Democratic election campaign last fall.

The appeal will be filed within the next four days, the time allotted for that purpose, by defense counsel J. Dress Pannell. In the meantime, the former Democratic Erie cabinet official remained free on $5,000 bond.

Convicted on two common law charges of malfeasance and non-feasance in office, Brownmiller faces a sentence or fine to be determined by Judge Howard W. Hughes of Washington county, specially appointed by the Pennsylvania supreme court to conduct the trial.

Found Guilty
Brownmiller was found guilty by a jury of seven men and five women after almost ten hours of deliberation. The verdict was returned at 2:35 a. m. yesterday. The defendant was not present. About 50 spectators were in the courtroom.

The jury acquitted Brownmiller on another count of nonfeasance in line with the court's instructions. The count charged Brownmiller with transferring highway funds without the governor's approval.

Brownmiller was convicted of transferring to Luzerne county the home of Republican Gov. Arthur H. James, $1,025,000 last fall to pad the highway payrolls in order to aid the Democratic party in its unsuccessful (Continued On Page Two)

U. S. Support Is Sought By France

Bonnet Makes Significant Plea

France To Defend Empire Against Nazi-Fascist Aggression, He Declares

SAYS PEACE KEY IS HELD BY U. S.

(International News Service)
PARIS, June 26.—At the crossroads of peace or war France today turned to the United States for support and was on record as ready to defend its empire against Nazi-Fascist aggression. A significant plea for immediate American intervention was voiced by Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, who declared that the United States could "banish the spectre of war" merely by proclaiming adherence with Britain and France.

Key To Peace
Speaking to members of the radical-Socialist party, he said: "The key to peace or war is held perhaps by the United States. If the United States made it clear that they are on our side when the conflict starts, the spectre of war would be banished definitely."

Observers regarded Bonnet's statement as strikingly significant coming hard on the heels of renewed indications Germany is preparing to strike in Central Europe.

He indicated the Franco-Turkish agreement will develop into a full military alliance and said it would block any attempted Italian thrust eastward in the Mediterranean.

Lashes "Peace At Any Price"
Editor's Note: While Bonnet spoke, Italian Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio was making a survey of the Albanian-Greek frontier. The hero of Addis Ababa, inspected Italian military units and bases throughout Albania.

Meanwhile, General M. Gustave Gamelin, chief of France's land, sea and air forces, flatly asserted that his country realizes "respect cannot be purchased with concessions," lashed out against "peace at any price" elements in both Britain and France, and added:

"With the dead of Verdun, we all think that victory cannot be achieved by hesitating before a necessary effort."

STUDY PLEA OF MARGIOTTI FOR BAR ADMITTANCE

Vale's argument was stopped abruptly by Judge Thomas D. Finletter, who stated that Charles J. Hepburn, acting as counsel for the board, had filed with the court the board's reasons for declining to admit Margiotti and that further argument was unnecessary.

The tribunal of seven then took the case under consideration and will decide whether the board's decision stands as well as whether the reasons for its decision are to be made public.

Hepburn told the court the board of examiners had no right to announce the reasons for its decisions to anyone except the court and that it was entirely up to the court to decide whether the board's findings should be made public.

As a practicing Pittsburgh attorney and a member of the bar of the state supreme court, Margiotti claimed the board of examiners was compelled to recommend his admission upon his complying with formalities of advertising and application. If admitted to practice in Philadelphia, he intends to move his law offices from Pittsburgh and Punxsutawney to this city.

BROWNMILLER IS CONVICTED; WILL SEEK NEW TRIAL

ful attempt to remain in power. He was charged with misusing more than $600,000 for that purpose. At no time was the charge made that Brownmiller personally benefited by the transactions.

The trial, which lasted two weeks, was highlighted by the appearance on the stand of former Gov. George H. Earle, in whose cabinet Brownmiller served, and Ex-Army General Charles J. Margiotti, both as prosecution witnesses.

Others To Be Tried
It was Margiotti who precipitated with his campaign charges during the Democratic primary campaign last year the Dauphin county grand jury investigation which resulted in the indictment of Brownmiller and David L. Lawrence, chairman of the Democratic state committee and former secretary of the commonwealth, and Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of the Democratic state committee and former secretary of labor and industry. Lawrence and Bashore will be tried this summer on charges of alleged extorting campaign funds from state employees.

The jury which deliberated in Brownmiller's case retired at 4:30 p. m. Saturday after being advised by Judge Hughes that the case was of great importance, both to the state and to the defendant. At 9:30 p. m. it returned for further instructions and then retired again until it reached a verdict.

Faces Another Trial
Several times during its long deliberations the jury sent out for coffee and sandwiches. One of the jurors, Mrs. Esther Bots, one of the two Democrats on the jury, became ill and had to be led from the jury room. She later recovered and returned.

The former cabinet official also faces trial on conspiracy charges in Luzerne county where he was indicted with 48 others by Luzerne county grand jury. The trial will open in September in Wilkes-Barre.

Brownmiller is a resident of Pottsville, Schuylkill county. He was appointed secretary of highways on April 6, 1938 by Governor Earle following the death of then secretary Warren Van Dyke. At that time Brownmiller was deputy secretary of highways, having been appointed on April 1, 1935 shortly after the advent of the Earle administration.

Brownmiller left school at 14, worked in his father's marble and granite shop for six years, cleaned shoes in a shoe factory for two years, and then worked as a clerk for the Philadelphia & Reading railroad company at Pottsville.

In 1922 he was elected to the Pennsylvania legislature and the following year was elected county commissioner in Schuylkill county, a post he held for 12 years, following which he became deputy secretary of highways.

WHOLE TAX SYSTEM NEEDS OVERHAULING

NOW that Congress has virtually completed action on the tax revision measure, providing some relief for business through the abolition of the undistributed earnings levy and by shifting some other imposts, plans should be made immediately for a broad study of the whole tax structure.

Such a study should be conducted by a joint committee of the Senate and the House, possibly along the lines suggested by Senator Barkley. It should be started during the Congressional recess, so that when the legislators return to their labors next January they will have before them data on which to construct a tax measure that will do more than hit the high spots of revision.

The tax modifications recently approved by House and Senate offer a measure of aid to overburdened industry, hamstrung by government restrictions, and should help to promote recovery and re-employment. But vastly more tax relief is needed to bring back national prosperity on a wide front.

Business and individual taxes, direct and indirect, seen and unseen, are sapping the economic strength of the Nation. There should be a complete overhauling of the tax system. The time to begin such an overhauling is now. Difficult as it may be for Congress to revise taxes in an election year, the effort should be made with courage and vigor.

KEEP OUR STATE TRADE FREE

At a recent conference on interstate trade restraints, a recommendation was unanimously adopted to the effect that "the taxing power of the states not be utilized to effect discriminations or to effect barriers to interstate commerce."

It is a basically sound idea. America would gravely err if she were to develop a system of commercial antagonism between the several states. The nation will succeed economically as a whole, or it will not succeed at all.

Certainly we do not want to introduce into this country a plan of economic rivalry comparable to that of Europe, wherein each individual State would try to ban the goods produced in other commonwealths.

Free trade may be a remote ideal in so far as the world at large is concerned. But it is a principle fundamentally applicable to the domestic life of America.

ALIEN REGISTRATION IN STATE

The alien registration act signed by Governor James will enable the State to keep a check on non-citizens within its borders. It should prove helpful in restraining subversive activities.

Complaints made against the measure prior to its passage, that it is "un-American," that it would open the way to police persecution and discrimination against aliens, are not convincing. The act requires all aliens over 18 to register by next January 1, excepting those who have filed applications of intention to become citizens, those who have resided continuously in this country since December 31, 1908, and those whose children have served in any of the Nation's wars.

There is nothing unfair or "un-American" in requiring aliens, who live here and enjoy our hospitality without any intention of becoming American citizens, to register for identification purposes.

Holders of motor drivers' licenses, of hunting and pistol permits, for example, find it no hardship to carry such credentials and produce them when required. Ordinary business transactions frequently demand identification of individuals. There is certainly nothing to show any intent to hurt those who come under the provisions of the act or to discriminate against them.

The only persons with reason to object to the registration requirements are the aliens who don't want any check-up on their identities, their whereabouts or their activities.

PENSIONS FOR LEGISLATORS

Senator Bankhead of Alabama, brother of Speaker Bankhead, wants pensions for members of Congress or, as he terms them in a more euphemistic expression, "retirement benefits." The idea isn't altogether new, but Senator Bankhead turns up with one or two unique arguments. He says that senators and representatives have no "cut loose" from sources of income to which return is seldom possible and that members would view legislation "in a more detached manner" if their financial future were assured.

Doubtless some members serve at real financial sacrifice, but the number can't be large. All too often the defeated senator or representative hangs around Washington seeking for another job. Perhaps the lure of Washington life has got him; perhaps his home town law practice or business never was what he pretended it to be. There are numerous cases of men who received $10,000 as members of Congress who are willing and anxious to get a job on some commission or in some department for $7,500, $5,000 or even less.

Members of Congress take rather good care of themselves. Their wage, over several decades, has been boosted from $5,000 to $7,500, and then to $10,000. This last figure Senator Borah of Idaho, not a rich man, refused to accept until he had gone before his constituents and been re-elected. Members have quite a few secretarial and clerical jobs at their disposal, often distributed to members of their families and relatives. Their mileage allowance, returning to and from sessions, is fixed at 5 cents, whereas the average railroad trip costs far less. A short time ago a federal income tax act was passed for the District of Columbia, but members of Congress and their staffs were exempted. Many of them live in Washington the year round and all of them derive their wage there.

The idea of putting members of the Legislature on life pensions, in the same manner as government workers under Civil Service rating, might remove them from the financial temptations or self-interest that Senator Bankhead so naively suggests. But, apart from the issue of expense, it hints too much a professional Legislature, living at public expense for life.

Reactions to Marriner Eccles' plea for further pump-priming are now complete. All hands appear to be in favor, except the pump.

Cactus Jack Garner has all but settled the fate of the Neutrality issue. After July 1, he announces, he will have a pressing engagement elsewhere.

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

CLOCK WATCHER BEST MOTHER

Until the baby is about two, he should sleep in a crib which will prevent his rolling out. Be sure his bars are not wide enough so that he can get his head through, and be sure that, as he grows older, he cannot unfasten the side and fall out. Forbid the youngster's first ventures at jumping up and down on the bed spring, a very hazardous activity. Spank for it, if necessary. Settle it forever.

After the child is about two, let him have a low cot to which he can safely go alone. In case it has springs, they should be stout. The mattress should be thick and firm. Until he sleeps dry all night, place a rubber sheet under the linen sheet. Let his bed have no bolster and no pillow, except perhaps a small one not too soft. Be sure not to cover the baby too heavily and too warmly. A light, downy comforter is far better than a heavy blanket. Let his covers be fastened securely at the bottom of the bed so he cannot slide down and smother. Straps can be improvised to hold his covers down, not too near his head.

Sleeping Bag
For the baby under two years or 18 months, a sleeping bag of soft, downy materials, enclosing all the child except his head, may, if very, very large and roomy, be desirable. In addition to keeping him covered, it may help prevent thumb-sucking. Have the baby's sleeping room well ventilated, with temperature not over 60 degrees in winter. Prevent drafts and make the open window safe with a strong screen. A screened sleeping porch may be the best place for him to sleep by night or day.

As the toddler goes to bed, encourage him to help pull the bed clothes up over him, training him in self-help and ability later to cover himself alone when uncovered during the night.

Follow The Clock
Put to bed, from the time of his birth, by the clock, the baby comes to enjoy the rhythm of regularity. But as soon as his waking begins and his interests in doing things widen, he may tease to have his bed time postponed, even resist going to bed. Then you are on trial. If you relax much, you will have trouble ahead.

Let him learn that you and he follow the clock. Make it a rule to say, "The clock says it is time for bed," rather than, "You must go to bed." The difference to him is very wide. He soon learns that the clock never wobbles, has no whims, gets no headaches, never argues, never waits. As soon as he can toddle, make it a rule to give him a warning several minutes before it is time to go to bed. Point to the hands on the clock. Show him where they will be when he will go. This is good emotional preparation for him, in case you are consistent. Blessed is the little child whose mother follows the clock.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

THE BACHELOR

Ed Durling is a Columnist upon the Los Angeles Times. He is now on his way to a European vacation, but before he left California he arranged with some of his friends to fill his column. One of the friends is a bachelor and what he wrote the other day is worth re-publishing. This chap (unknown) heads his column with a snatch from Kipling: "Down to Gehenna or up to the Throne. He travels fastest, who travels alone," and then he goes on as follows:

"Ed Durling was once a fellow who minded his own business, but since he started writing a column he's different. He carries a piece of copy paper in his inside pocket and keeps asking questions. 'A fellow like you should get married,' he says to me. 'Look at that pair of baggy pants; look at that red tie with a green shirt. You need a woman to take care of you.' HINTS AND DINTS

Sun gets tonight 7:35. Sun rises tomorrow 4:30.

There is again talk of making the term of president of the United States six years and allowing only one term. Even four years is too long for some that are elected.

Next day the debutante procures a record of her dancing partners from the fingerprints on her back.

The government saved eighteen million dollars in paper, ink, labor and storage since paper money was reduced two-thirds its former size ten years ago. And the small sized bills are even harder to get now than the old ones were.

TODAY'S STORYETTE
It's a bit subtle, perhaps, but—

During the late war a doctor was examining a number of men claiming disability. One chap complained that he was deaf in one ear. The doctor told him to cover his deaf ear and then asked if he could hear. "Yes," replied the soldier. "Now cover the good ear," the doctor instructed. The man did so. "Can you hear me now?" inquired the doctor.

"No," replied the soldier, and wonder why his claim was thrown out.

The first symptom of kleptomania is taking things for granted.

A local barber told a customer the other day that he had lost his voice. His victim replied: "You can find it in my right ear."

SOLO CELEBRATION
"Sam, you old reprobate," reproved the welfare director, "what do you mean by going out and getting drunk? I've a good mind to withhold your relief check this week."

"Boss, I was just celebrating my golden wedding anniversary," said the man.

"Oh, in that case you can have the check and also my congratulations. Give them both to your wife for me, will you?"

"She ain't got nothing to do with this celebration," said the man. It's me who's been married 50 years. She's my sixth wife."

A bachelor is a chap who doesn't believe in matrimony in any shape, manner or form.

Our idea of real optimists: A man aged 79 married a woman aged 72, and they spent the first two weeks of their honeymoon trying to rent a home near a school house.

A visit to the customer makes a fellow a different man.

"What is that fight going on over there?" asked the doctor who had just examined a bunch of school kids.

A small boy volunteered the answer.

"That's one of the deficient kids hammering the pants off one of those you marked perfect," he explained.

The chairman of the steering committee is a woman and the rest of the members is a man.

It has been suggested that this talk about priming the pump be stopped and instead the pump be fixed.

National slogan: "The bigger it is, the better it will balance."

We read of a church that has abolished the collection plate. Instead a box is placed at the door and those who contribute drop their coin in there. This even beats having one-armed men taking up the collection. It also saves those embarrassment who have the plate passed under their chins and do not drop anything in.

When the depositor called up to verify a suspicion his balance was getting low, the banker replied: "Why, there isn't anything to it."

Our little daughter, Alice Marie, was denied by her father a pleasure she had expected to enjoy. That night when Alice said her prayers she concluded with this petition:

"And please God, don't give my papa any more children. He don't know how to treat those he's got now"—E. K.

This morning's mail brings this postal card: "Recently you had in your column the definition of a lady. Kindly tell us what constitutes a gentleman."

And here are my specifications for a gentleman: A man who retains enough chivalry to resent the slightest slur on a woman's reputation, even if her conduct may be suspicious; who is as courteous to a woman laborer as he would be to a millionaire employer's glamorous daughter; who never fails to rise when any one stops at a table where he is sitting with a woman; who never neglects to pull out from the table the chair of a woman companion thereto; who never holds a stemmed glass by the bowl or touches a table-knife at the blade; who never leaves his hat on after crossing the threshold of a home or after meeting a woman anywhere; who has a tolerance for what is decently silly, but who prefers what is fine, especially in music, literature, art, the cinema, the drama; who avoids all controversial subjects—especially religion and politics—during all social intercourse; who avoids fads in clothing, jewelry, stationery, furniture; who is a conscientious patron of the dentist; who is scrupulously clean in body, apparel and conversation; yet who is as popular among men as among women.

Dear Miss Markel—I am going to the World's Fair. Since this is my first long train trip, please tell me how much I should tip and who on the train should be tipped.

MAZIE.

Answer—Tip the red cap (at each station) who carries your bag, 25 cents. On the train, tip the porter 25 cents for each night spent there. Tip the waiter after each meal the usual waiter's fee. If you have the same waiter throughout your trip, 25 cents for each day spent on the train should be your minimum tip. The brakeman and conductor should receive no gratuities.

To be a proper gardener
Is not within my power;
I cannot bear to throw away
The smallest, poorest flower—

I cannot bear to thin them,
The seeds that burst and grew
And filled my beds with lovely leaves,
Green and bright and new.

Even with brash horseradish
And delicate yellow sorrel
And pusley with its rosy stems
I hate to pick a quarrel!

It's hard to sort the flowers,
And tell them from the weeds:
They all have exercised the rare
Intelligence of seeds.

That so informs nasturtiums,
And so inclines the birches,
That the right ones are small and gay,
And the right ones tall as churches.

No, I cannot bear a daisy out—
I can't discard an aster—
I can't control a plant at all;
They, and not I, are master.

WORRY

There was a man
And all his life
He'd work in a shipyard;
And he had a baby.
And it was to be christened,
And for a week
He couldn't sleep nights
Because he was worried
For fear the minister
Would hurt the baby
When he hit with the bottle.

A THOUGHT

We grumble at the things that are.
The things we fear will be.
And find no time for thankfulness
For blessings that we see.

If we would for a little while
Stop looking for the bad,
We'd see so much of good in life
We'd simply just be glad.

Prohibition Is Coming To Life
Methodists Would Outlaw Liquor
Would Dry Up District Of ColumbiaBy CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

PROHIBITION seems to be perking up again. The other day the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist church unanimously adopted a report by its Committee on Christian Citizenship outlawing all alcoholic beverages and forms of gambling. To be sure, this was a rather local manifestation, but there have been other symptoms of a similar nature here and there throughout the country. Not only do Drys call attention to them; the editorial management of the Distilled Spirits Institute's organ also has called attention to them—warningly, of course, as is natural from that quarter.

The Baltimore M. E. Conference's report expresses itself thus: "We are profoundly stirred over the awful conditions brought about by the organized liquor traffic in the bounds of the conference and the nation. We believe it well that the people be informed of these evils and that an appeal should be made to churches, church schools and young people's organizations for total abstinence from all alcoholic beverages."

Whatever may be one's opinion of legislative prohibition probably nobody will question the Drys' right to urge voluntary total abstinence. However, there are signs of a renewed attempt to make total abstinence involuntary. In fact, Senator Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota has had a bill in Congress at the current session to dry up the District of Columbia. He hasn't pushed it very hard, but it does go to indicate that the old prohibition spirit isn't entirely extinct on Capitol Hill.

On National Guinea Pig

The District of Columbia is a small spot on the map, it's true, but it's a kind of national guinea pig. Folk with ideas such as prohibition always are desperately anxious to try them out in the capital because it's supposed to be so representative. If one of these schemes can be wished onto Washington and get itself recognized as fairly successful, it immediately is pointed to as an example for the whole country.

Incidentally, it doesn't matter a bit whether Washingtonians enjoy being experimented with. Let prohibition be proposed for another try-out in Manhattan and the New Yorkers would overwhelmingly override the suggestion, it goes without saying. Washingtonians, having no votes, can't do that.

National prohibition established itself by way of Washington the last time. There were, indeed, dry states already, but the wet states stayed wet while Washington did. Then Wayne B. Wheeler hit on the happy notion of aridifying the capital. It was of no consequence to congressmen from the dry states that Washingtonians (they're as predominantly wet as New Yorkers are) objected. Said congress-

GOLFERS ARE ALWAYS UN-

I met him in the locker room, his eye with joy a-shine
Said he: "At last I've done it! Shot the round in seventy-nine!
A dozen times I've missed it. Till the fear grew deep in me
That the promised land of golfdom I should never live to see.
But just look the score card over, which I got the boys to sign.
At the eighteenth tee you'll notice I'd a five for seventy-nine."

"That," I said, "is an achievement which you ought to celebrate."
"I missed a putt," he answered or I'd had a seventy-eight!

I was careless with my mashie, pitching out to number three
So a seventy-seven is really what the total ought to be.

I rimmed the cup on fourteen and that cost me just one more,
And I missed one shot entirely, or I'd had a seventy-four.

I left him with his fellows, still recounting every shot
One moment proud and boastful of the splendid score he'd got.
And the next—relating sadly (strange how man's emotions mix)

How that seventy-nine he'd worked for should have been a seventy-six.

The Great Game Of Politics

By FRANK R. KENT

Another China Egg

WASHINGTON, June 26.

Couched in the erudite language of the White House economists and employing the novel terms lately inserted in the New Deal lexicon, which take the place of spending, pump-priming, debt, deficit and other words grown unpopular with the people, the President's recent proposal Congress authorize a "self-liquidating" program involving $3,860,000,000, is plausible only on the surface, and only there to the non-descending.

Actually, it is as phony as the well-known china egg. Stripped of such phrases as "stimulative investment" and "compensatory fiscal policy" and "contributive charges" (instead of taxes), all of which have been recently coined by the bright boys of the "inner circle" operating on the idea advanced generations ago by the great Talleyrand, who wrote "an important art of politicians is to find new words for institutions which under their old names have become odious to the public"—stripped of these phrases, what has been handed Congress is another spending program greater than any that has preceded it.

Neither the elaborate argument offered in his letter to Senator Byrnes nor the specious pleas about buying equipment for the railroads, nor the emphasis laid on "government investment", nor the utterly absurd statement that in the end this program may not cost the government anything, alter the fact that here is simply a gigantic proposition to squander more billions in the desperate effort to conceal the failure of the billions already squandered either to reduce unemployment or restore the economic health of the country.

In brief, it is an administration move to hide the tragic failure of seven years of futile expenditures and carry the New Deal through the 1940 election. It comes from a man whose sole remedy for everything today is to spend. Literally, that is all that is left. At a moment when the vital thing is to regain control of the Federal finances; at a time when we are about to wind up the fiscal year with the ninth consecutive annual deficit, estimated at $3,400,000,000, with another in prospect for next year even greater—at such a time as this, Mr. Roosevelt presents to a bewildered Congress and a debt-ridden country a spending program which, however it may help certain groups, will carry us still farther away from national solvency and impose the government weight still more heavily on private business.

The things that make this program worse than the others are—first, experience has already demonstrated the complete futility of spending to do more than temporarily stimulate business; second, it is part of the 1940 strategy of the palace politicians; third, there is no suggestion that new taxes be levied so as to balance the new spending with new revenue; fourth, the facts are not frankly presented, are hidden under the new words, and, if authorized, will be kept from the public by a deliberately deceptive setup.

The argument is made that these new billions will not increase either debt or deficit, which is, of course, nonsense, and the phrase "self-liquidating" is used to convey the idea that no loss will be incurred, which is grossly misleading. If a private corporation were to make such statements with as little foundation, it would find itself hauled before the SEC. Hercey denounced, severely penalized. It is almost incredible that after the experience of the country it can again swallow the story that because business will not expand and banks make loans the government must take over the job. That is the alibi and the new spending proposal is in line with the main political issue which the New Deal advisers expect to force next year.

The appointment of Mr. Jesse Jones, in whom business generally has confidence, as head of the new Federal Loan Agency, and the effort to make this new scheme bear a resemblance to the well run RFC, are expected to give it strength in Congress. It is, however, a fake resemblance and while Mr. Jones is in no position to say so, no one knows better than he that the type of loans mentioned in this program are anything but "self-liquidating"; that if they were sound loans there is available for them ample private capital anxious to get to work, that to keep these expenditures off the debt and out of the deficit can't be done—that it can only appear to be done by setting up a double budget and adopting deceitful book-keeping methods. In the present state of the nation to present so uncandid a program demonstrates the plight to which the New Dealers are reduced. It does seem that members of Congress who still retain hope of averting inflationary disaster, would be justified in going the limit in opposition to this extraordinary proposal.

men cast their ballots as per their home folks' desire and the District went (theoretically) as dry as a bone. Thereupon the Drys proclaimed, "See how well prohibition works in the capital!" And out in the sticks nice temperance folk believed it. So we got national prohibition, on the strength of the Washington guinea pig's alleged reaction.

I don't mean to say that prohibition's thoroughly resuscitated yet, but it's reviving a little.

In Prohibition Days

Back in prohibition days I once had occasion to go from Washington to Baltimore (another wet spot) to see then Governor Ritchie of Maryland. I saw him and had an hour to kill before the first train home again. Stopping in at an obvious speakeasy I said, "Gimme a beer."

"We only got near beer," replied the bartender suspiciously.

"All right," I said. "Near beer is wet and I'm thirsty. But if you think I have anything to do with prohibition enforcement you do me a great injustice. I'm a respectable newspaperman from Washington, here to get an interview with your governor. Here's my Press Club card and my Congressional Press Gallery card and my card as a member of the White House Correspondents' Association. And if I have to drink near beer, I shan't think much of your Baltimore hospitality."

"Brother," cried the bartender, "the drinks are on the house. I've got some of the best Maryland rye you ever tasted. Have a quart of it."

I took needed beer, though. Hard liquor is too pungent for my taste.

If they are not too personal about writing me a guest column, entitled "Why I Won't Get Married Even If Someone Would Have Me," And this is it.

"I am in my forties. I have a good job. I even pay income tax. I'm a college graduate. Never been sick in my life. I'm six feet two and weigh one hundred eighty-five pounds. I remember when Durling only weighed one hundred eighty-five pounds. I used to play football against him. He would give you a stiff arm on the chin or dig with his elbow and say, 'Pardon me! Always a gentleman, the rat. Now, to the subject of why I don't get married. Why should I? I'm happy. Why take a chance on that happiness? Why have some capricious dame telling you what to eat, when to get up, when to go out, what to wear and when to smoke and what to smoke and so on ad nauseam? Then why have some body trying to make you admire her dearest girl friend, but not admire her too much? And to try to make you love her mother? It makes me shiver to think of it!"

"Listen, I don't get married because I've seen too much marriage. It would give me a nice home, you say. I have a nice home. I have two nice homes—a penthouse in the city and bungalow on the beach. A woman's touch. I have a woman's touch administered by a nice elderly lady who keeps house for me. And, boy, how she can cook! Children! I get plenty of children's company. My married friends leave their children with my housekeeper when they go on trips. And the kids cry their heads off when their parents come to take them away. Women are all right. Some of my best friends are women. My mother was a woman. I like women. But I like those best who don't want to marry me."

"You say a bachelor leads a wild life, and ruins his health. Nonsense. I don't lead any wild life. Many married men lead wild lives, though, and mostly against their will. A married man comes home after a day's work and he's dead tired. He has planned a nice evening in front of a fire, but the little woman who has had her afternoon beauty sleep says, 'Honey, are we going over to Betty and Joe's tonight for dinner, then play bridge for awhile and then we will, go to some night spot.' Husband says: 'Hey, I've got to be on the job in the morning; I'm tired.' She says: 'Oh, being nasty again. Just because Betty and Joe are friends of mine and not yours, you suddenly discover you have to go to work in the morning. You're never tired when the boys in your old outfit in France are giving a party, are you? No, then you're full of pep.' So the married guy says: 'Aw, what's the use? I could cry when I think of those poor saps.... Here are a few of my favorite quotations: (Yeah, I've got one of those big quotation books like Durling, too.) 'Women marry because they don't want to work'—Mary Garden. You said it, Mary.... I have always thought that every woman should marry, and no man—Diarrell. Smart man, Diarrell. He said that a woman hath an ear by the tail'—Anon. Ad Anon was a man of experience. He also said: 'The world is full of women and the women full of wile.' I'll say they are."

Portrait of
A TYPICAL TELEPHONE MAN

Calling at a home to fix a telephone, one of our Installer-Repairmen found this note:

To the Telephone Man: The key is in the mailbox. Be careful of the kittens so they don't get out. The food near the 'phone is for the dog. His name is Bobby. He won't bother you if you feed him. Thanks!

This note is typical of the confidence which most people have in "the telephone man." One day he is given the key of the house. The next day, he may work in a bank, surrounded by thousands of dollars in cash.

Wherever he goes, people welcome him, with complete confidence in his careful workmanship and his integrity.

There are almost 1,500 Installers and Repairmen in this company. They play a mighty big part in giving Pennsylvania a telephone service that is second to none.

Following are some interesting facts and figures about these men, based on a recent survey.

THEY STARTED YOUNG—at the average age of 19—and have had 16 years of telephone service—which makes their average age today around 35. They average 5 feet 9 inches tall; weigh 165 lbs. Almost all had attended high school before they joined this company. Some went to college.

NINE OUT OF TEN of these men are married and have children. Half of them own their own homes and eight out of ten have a car (most common are 1935 sedans). Many of them have driven Bell Telephone cars for five or ten years without an accident. More than one-third own a share of telephone stock. Two-thirds belong to one or more fraternal groups.

MOST OF THESE MEN are keenly interested in all sports, but like baseball, football and basketball best. Their hobbies are hunting and fishing, photography and woodwork. They like Wallace Beery and Myrna Loy in the movies; Jack Benny on the radio. Favorite author is Lloyd C. Douglas.

ON THE JOB, they take a real pride in giving the kind of service our customers want. Installations and repairs are made promptly, with the convenience of the customer always in mind. These men are as careful of your property as if it were their own. Their neat, orderly, quiet workmanship has brought us hundreds of letters of praise.

IT MEANS A GREAT DEAL when the Installer finishes his job and says, "You are connected!" It means that you're connected to every Bell telephone in town and to millions of other telephones all over the world. It means that you're in touch with your friends and with social and business opportunities. It means that you can reach almost anyone, anywhere, any time... quickly, easily, at low cost.

(International News Service)

WAGUEGAN, Ill., June 26. — Dorothy Lamour, screen and radio songstress, and Herbie Kay, the band leader, may not have been divorced for keeps when they were parted by a Chicago court last May 20.

So did Miss Lamour today in revealing that she and Kay had agreed to "a six months leave of absence" from each other, at the end of which time the Sarong girl either will quit the screen and devote all her time to being Mrs. Kay, or will decide to continue her career. At the time of the divorce both Kay and Miss

Lamour claimed it was a case of too many careers in one family that had made a failure of their marriage.

Miss Lamour was in Waukegan to take part in the city's "homecoming" celebration for Jack Benny, radio and screen comic.

JANE: There you go, praising the Martins' Dodge again. Why, I'd be only too delighted to decide on Dodge, if we could afford to buy a big car...

DICK: Afford a Dodge? Listen, dear, don't you realize that the new Dodge costs even less than last year's—only a few dollars more than a small car!

DICK: And look at what Dodge gives you! That new gearshift at the steering wheel doesn't cost a cent extra...the front seat is wide enough for three...and there's that new windshield that's bigger than ever!

JANE: It's certainly a luxurious car, too!...and it has the smartest-looking front end I ever saw!

JANE: Darling, I've certainly got to hand it to you! Here I was secretly wishing for a Dodge, but I never realized that it was priced so low we could afford it!

DICK: That was an easy mistake to make. When you consider what a big car Dodge is, it's hard to believe that you can own it just about as easily as a small car!

Mercer District Attorney Denounces Prosecution Of Dairymen In County

(Special To The News)

MERCER, Pa., June 26.—Coming as an unusual innovation in legal procedure in Mercer county, a militant district attorney here, in a letter to a Sharon alderman, championed the cause of Mercer county dairymen and denounced the activities of two enforcement agents of the Pennsylvania Milk Control board.

District Attorney Edwin C. Moon, in his letter to Alderman Lewis Lee, before whom a group of Mercer farmers appeared last week, branded the agents' work as "outrageous" and notified Lee he could expect no prosecution of such cases if "facts of any other cases measure up to those of the cases of last week."

Orders Fines Returned
The prosecutor notified Lee to refund $5,325 fines which he imposed last week when 15 dairymen appeared to face charges of selling milk at a price below that established by the state board.

While 15 farmers paid $25 fines and costs and one appealed his case to court, another, Gigliotti Antonia, of West Middlesex R. F. D. 1, it is learned, spent 10 days in the Mercer jail because he could not pay his fine.

Calls Governor Today
Today over long-distance telephone, District Attorney Moon called upon Governor Arthur H. James to order an immediate investigation and to discharge the two agents and others responsible for the Mercer arrests.

While the district attorney led the farmers' fight to right the alleged wrong, Mercer County Republican Chairman Albert E. Moses hurled charges of "politics" and declared that the agents were attempting to intimidate farmers on behalf of the Democratic party.

All Mercer county seethed today as Moon's letter to Alderman Lee was made public.

George H. Bolinger Asks Second Term

Present County Commissioner Asks Nomination On Republican Ticket

GEORGE H. BOLINGER

George H. Bolinger, one of the county commissioners of Lawrence county, today announced his intention to seek nomination on the Republican ticket for re-election. His statement of announcement follows: "Four years ago I was a candidate for the office of county commissioner on a platform of business economy. The voters of the county apparently believed my platform for I was elected with a flattering vote. On September 12 the voters will name their candidates for commissioners, and I am asking their support again, solely upon the record of my past four years.

"Believing that tax money should be guarded as carefully as personal funds, I entered the office with that idea in mind. It seems useless to relate the various steps by which economies were effected. A glance at the county treasury will tell the story much more pointedly. There is in the county treasury today sufficient money to pay off every dollar of bonded indebtedness the county owes, if the bonds were callable and the indebtedness was $469,000.

This year the taxpayers were given a two mill reduction in their county taxes, bringing the levy to six mills, the lowest total since 1916. To the two mills should be added two and a half more reduced in the two years previous.

In spite of the reductions in tax levy we have done considerable work for the county at reasonable expense. The West Washington street bridge was changed from a traffic hazard to a safe bridge. The river near the Cherry street bridge was dredged, the channel changed and the west pier of the bridge saved from certain destruction. Similar work is going on now at the Paper Mill.

The court house has been put in the best shape it has been for twenty five years, it has been painted inside and out, improvements have been made and the court house is now a sound building. In addition, the Boyles property adjoining the Court House has been purchased and is being remodelled to accommodate offices for which the county is now paying about $200 per month rent.

This brief recital of accomplishments is not for the purpose of self aggrandizement. It is merely a presentation of facts to which the taxpayers are entitled. The county is in a sound financial position, the taxes are low, and the taxpayers' dollar is being spent with the idea of getting one hundred cents worth. I have kept my pledge of business economy in the court house. On that basis, and that alone, I ask the consideration of the Republican voters at the primary election. If nominated and elected I can only promise a continuation of the same business practices that I have followed during the past four years.

GEORGE H. BOLINGER.

Swank Country Club In Newport, Kentucky, Is Robbed Of Between $9,000 And $11,000

(International News Service)
CINCINNATI, June 26.—Covering a woman bookkeeper with guns, two men scooped between $9,000 and $11,000 from a steel money cabinet in the swank Beverly Hills Country Club today and escaped in an automobile.

Mrs. Catherine Easton, the bookkeeper, told police that the money was in bills of small denomination. She said that she and other employees mistook the men for salesmen when they entered the club carrying brief cases.

The club is one of the popular night spots of Newport, Ky., across the Ohio river from Cincinnati.

Descriptions of the men tallied with two men who held up a concession manager Sunday at the Cincinnati Reds' baseball park and escaped with $10,000.

SIGNS OF RHEUMATIC FEVER USUALLY PRESENT LONG BE- FORE HEART BECOME AF- FECTED

Chronic infections frequently complicate ailments in childhood. Doctors meet up with these things almost every day and realize that these infections are, for the most part, unnecessary. That is, they can be cleared up and the source of infection removed.

By far the most important and serious of such ailments is rheumatic fever, a disease common to children between the ages of five and fifteen. It is most common in the temperate climates, where upper respiratory infection occurs most frequently and is most frequently found in the Great Lakes region. In England the disease is even more prevalent than it is in this country. There appears to be a direct connection between dampness and the incidence of rheumatic fever, for it has been pretty well proven that it is more common in low-lying sections of a city than it is in the higher areas.

No one definitely can completely describe rheumatic fever, for it occurs in many forms which have one thing in common they almost always affect the heart. Unless extreme care is taken with the patient, his life is shortened.

In most cases, the signs of rheumatic fever are present long before the heart is affected. That, of course is the time to recognize the disease and start treating it. When this is done, the chances that the child will develop heart diseases are greatly diminished.

Early warnings of the disease may appear in a number of forms, but the most common are these four:

Pains in the joints. Repeated head colds.

Sore throat. Pale skin and listlessness.

Pain in the joints is fairly common in children particularly in girls between the ages of ten and fifteen years. By no means all the children who complain of pains in their legs are going to have rheumatic fever and heart trouble. However, most of the children who do develop heart trouble from rheumatic fever do complain of such aches and pains, so it is a good idea to pay some attention to them when they occur.

Parents too often dismiss such complaints as "growing pains," and give it no further consideration. Through this carelessness, parents often stand by while their child develops serious heart damage.

Some of these pains are less likely than others to be due to rheumatic fever. For instance, if the child complains of the ache only at night or only when he is very, very tired, there isn't much chance that this is warning of rheumatic fever. But if the pains occur in the morning as well as at night and appear in the arms as well as the legs, then look out.

Don't take any chances with pains such as any of these I have described. Call in your doctor or take your child to see him. Let him decide whether or not that pain in the legs is due to the fever. If the doctor examines your child and finds no symptoms of the fever, he will probably send him home and tell you to bring him in again in a month or so for another examination.

The Human Side Of The News

(By EDWIN C. HILL)

Copyright 1939 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The news that they're going to line Sixth avenue here in New York with trees—big ones—reminds one of that story of Zola Gale, written many years ago, in which the sad experiences of slum children taken to the country were related. The chirping of the crickets frightened them. They were dreadfully unhappy in this strange green world. They were filled with dismay. They longed for the roar of the elevated and the merry lilt of the grind-organs. So far indeed, had they become estranged from the "good earth."

And will the familiar roar of the elevated still ring in their ears now that it is gone? I have found persons who confess with a sheepish grin that they rather miss the old rattlerap railroad. But there is little danger that this nostalgia will bar us from full appreciation of the Sixth avenue trees. The public fancy for Joyce Kilmer's poem, "Only God Can Make a Tree," so unhappily now torn to tatters from too much quoting, is proof enough of this.

If Bob Mores had nine lives, placed end to end, he surely would create for us a pastoral Eden, interwoven with his bridges and viaducts. It probably will come anyway. The City of Tomorrow will not be all skyways and ramps and set-backs and bullet-nosed cars zipping thru and there, there's the same old magic of soil and moisture down under. This scrapping of the elevated and replacing it with a double row of beautiful wine-glass elms, all in the brief space of a year or two is good theatre, in its way. Things like that haven't happened in our devil-take-the-hindmost progress—in which the hindmost all too frequently has been a tree, or a city child who needed it.

They say the trees will "air condition" Sixth avenue, "making the avenue cooler in hot weather and warmer in winter." That isn't just a figure of speech. Trees are primarily the air conditioners of the planet and they are supremely important in its delicately balanced life equations. Every pastoral poet, from Virgil, writing his "Georgics," on down to Joyce Kilmer, has known that. Hesiod, the Greek, had the feeling of it, perhaps better than any other. The following quotation from his farm almanac is included here to suggest an ancient wisdom which cities sometimes forget, but which we may yet regain:

"When Zeus has finished sixty wintry days after the solstice, then the star Arcturus leaves the holy stream of ocean and first rises brilliant at dusk. After him, the shrilly wailing daughter of Pandion, the swallow, appears to men when the spring is just beginning. Before she comes, prune the vines, for it is best so. But when the snail climbs up the plants from the earth to escape the fields, then it is on longer the season for digging vineyards, but to whee, your sickles and rouse up your slaves.

"When the artichoke flowers, and the chirping grasshopper sits in a tree and pours down his shrill song continually from under his wings in the season of wearisome heat, then goats are plumped and wine sweetens."

No doubt we will have no plump goats or singing grasshoppers in Sixth avenue, but we will perhaps have clock Capella, the goat, in the eastern sky, through the boughs of trees; and, at any rate, wrens and chirping sparrows will be nesting near our apartment windows, if not Hesiod's swallows. And wrens are not only saucy, chubby little creatures but dandy singers, too, and that will be quite something in old Dr. Parkhurst's "lane of infamy," which once led Inspector Byrnes to proclaim the efficacy of the "law in the end of a night stick," and which was once an ace exhibit of sin in those old books such as "New York By Gaslight."

Hopfully, the subway under the avenue will dive deep enough not to hurt the roots of the trees. There's elbow room enough for ever, body, if we arrange things intelligently. Our back-to-the-land movement hasn't turned out so well. Here's hoping the reverse trend will be more successful. It's showing along, what with our penhouse gardening and all that. We in the cities may yet hear, with old Hesiod, "the voice of the crane who cries from the clouds above to give the signal for plowing."

Huge Posse Seeks Capture Of Olson

Nearly 500 Heavily Armed Men On Trail Of Desperado In Wisconsin

(International News Service)

HAYWARD, Wis., June 26.—A posse of upwards of 500 heavily armed men today began a "final drive" which they hoped would result in the capture or killing of Ray Olson, sharpshooting desperado who for ten days has been sought in Wisconsin's north woods for the murder of two sheriff's deputies.

Sheriff George Seeshueter, leading the possemen, declared he is sure Olson had been driven into a six-mile strip of densely wooded and swampy land east of Hayward, where today's hunt was concentrated.

The sheriff, who believes Olson may be the man wanted for the kidnap-murder of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, said he did not think the killer could escape.

On June 17, Olson killed two men on an auto theft charge and the manhunt has been under way ever since.

Charge British Woman Stripped Of Clothing By Japs

Remove Clothing Of Husband Also

Anglo-British Tension Reaches Dangerous Degree Result Of Disclosures

JAPANESE DENY INCIDENT REPORTS

(International News Service)

TIENTSIN, June 26.—A British woman was stripped of her clothing by Japanese soldiers and submitted to what authorities described as a "most degrading search" in the presence of Chinese and foreign passersby at the blockade barricades, bringing Anglo-Japanese tension to a dangerous high point today.

The woman, Mrs. D. Finlay, manager of the Tientsin Country Club, was obliged to pass the barricades daily for business reasons. Her husband, caretaker of the British Charter bank, was also obliged to remove all of his clothing.

Editor's note: Exchange Telegraph agency reports to London stated the Japanese spokesman in Tientsin denied all knowledge of the incident, declaring such acts are "against the principles of the military authorities and punishable under the regulations."

Crowds of Curious Mrs. Finlay was obliged to take off most of her clothing in the open, while crowds of curious gathered and despite the remonstrances of passing white persons. She was taken into a hut, where Chinese females, urged by male Japanese sentries, forced her to remove all of her clothes except a narrow girdle.

A Japanese soldier remained in the hut. The door of the building remained open, exposing Mrs. Finlay to the full view of the crowds outside. The sentry turned his head only for a moment while Mrs. Finlay removed the last of her garments. The woman's husband meanwhile, helpless to aid his wife, was being searched outside, his clothing scattered about by the sentries. Mrs. Finlay found her husband in his underwear, picking up various pieces of clothing, when she emerged from the shed.

The stripping of the German-born British woman and her husband, and incidents involving both American and English subjects, were protested by British Consul Maj. G. A. Herbert and the American consul general, John K. Caldwell.

Representations charging the Japanese sentries mistreated American Seaman Robert S. Casey of Seattle, detained for four days for failing to show a seaman's certificate upon demand, were made by Caldwell. Japanese authorities promised an investigation.

Maj. Herbert vigorously protested the stripping of the Finlays and nine other British subjects who have been submitted to indignities at the barricades.

Residents in the foreign concessions foresaw no immediate relief in the situation after more than a fortnight of Japanese pressure. Food continued scarce, although no real hardship was as yet reported.

Both the British and the Japanese seemed to have reached the point where neither side was willing to make concessions without losing prestige on the one hand and "face," much the same thing, on the other.

All British subjects, unless absolutely obliged to do so, refrained from entering or leaving the concessions.

Volant Citizens Will Take Over Volant College Reunion Event After This Year

Plans for the annual Volant college alumni reunion and Home-Coming Day for former citizens of the Volant community, which will take place on Wednesday, have been completed, President John B. Shaw announced today.

It is also announced that citizens of Volant will have charge of the plans for next year's gathering and the event will be turned over to residents of the Volant community to carry on this annual gathering which has been an event of long standing. Because of the fact that many of the Volant college alumni members are getting up in years and the business of making arrangements for the event is a heavy task, the Volant people will take care of the arrangements in the future and the old college students will be the guests of the citizens on that day.

Members will gather in the morning and will enjoy dinner at the noon hour in the Presbyterian church. The afternoon will be spent with a formal program, when Judge W. Walter Braham and former Judge James A. Chambers will be the speakers.

Temple Goes To Trial Tuesday With Two Others

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 26.—H. H. Temple, dismissed chief engineer in the state highways department during the Erie administration, and James P. Kirk and Victor Skol, Pittsburgh insurance agents, will go on trial tomorrow in Dauphin county court in the second of the series of trials arising out of last fall's campaign charges.

The three have been indicted on charges of conspiracy to monopolize the state contracting business in western Pennsylvania.

Temple, who now resides in Kentucky, was dismissed by former Gov. George H. Earle after a state police investigation of the Erie gravel case in which it was charged inferior road materials were used in the Erie highway district.

Miss Priscilla O'Connor of Pittsburgh, N. Y., who has been visiting Nancy Heck of Moody avenue for the past four days, and whose pocketbook was stolen from her locked car while she was playing golf, was fortunate in finding it in a thicket near the parked car.

Among other things, the purse contained the copyright to the song "Flandino" which Miss O'Connor wrote and which is now in the hands of Horace Heidt, well known composer and orchestra leader.

After taking the money, the thief apparently tossed the pocketbook carelessly into the woods. All remaining articles were left intact.

NEW CASTLE MATRON DECLARES LONG SEARCH FOR RIGHT MEDICINE DIDN'T END TILL MONTH AGO, WHEN SHE LUCKILY TRIED VENDOL.

Just because you have tried medicine after medicine without getting the relief that you thought is no reason why you should give up in despair and feel that nothing can help you. Many local people who have had this experience are now taking Vendol, and the Vendol Man at Eckerd's Cut Rate Drug hears every day from happy users of this great Root, Herb, and Alkaline medicine, who have found gratifying relief through its use when nothing else they had tried seemed to help them. This was the case of Mrs. Mary Carson of 4 South View Ave., New Castle, who says:

"A long, continued, constipated condition had caused me to suffer in many ways. My appetite disappeared, and what little food I did force into my stomach almost always distressed me with painful gas and heartburn; my sleep at night was pathetic, because I was called up from bed so often; dizzy spells had me reeling almost every day; and, more recently, I developed such a backache that I could hardly bear the misery."

"It was simply one medicine after another with no relief, but I got only temporary relief. I was pretty well discouraged, as you can readily understand, but I decided to have one last try with Vendol, because it was so highly recommended by well known people."

All druggists sell Vendol, so it is not difficult to get, and the Vendol Man is daily at Eckerd's Cut Rate Drug, 118 E. Washington St., to explain all about it. So, come see him; learn how Vendol will help you, too.

MRS. MARY CARSON

"Let me tell you, this medicine was as different as night from day from the other medicine I'd taken. Why, it got my bowels moving smoothly, and thoroughly with just a few doses. Now, although I've taken it just one month, I have a 'jigger's appetite' and eat whatever I want without a trace of distress; I sleep like a baby from night 'til morning, without getting up at all; the dizzy spells never seem to bother me any more; and there simply seems to be no sign of the old backache or leg pains. It took Vendol to change a bad stomach into a good one for me. So, I don't hesitate to recommend it to everyone else."

Atlantic Clipper Completes Trip

Round-Trip Flight To Europe Ends Successfully On Sunday Morning

By VIOLET SWEET HAVEN International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, June 26.—Our round trip "press-preview" flight in the Atlantic Clipper belongs to the winged pages of aviation history today but for the passengers it will remain a never-to-be-forgotten adventure.

Looking more like the editorial room of a newspaper than the world's most luxurious airliner, the Atlantic Clipper landed at Port Washington, L. I., yesterday morning at 11:33, completing the round trip flight to Europe of American newspaper correspondents—the first non-official Americans ever to fly the Atlantic in a commercial airplane.

As the giant flying boat approached the American continent, the reporters, despite the pre-breakfast hour, drank a champagne toast to Capt. William D. Culbertson, master of the junket; Capt. W. A. Winston, first officer; the crew and the establishment by Pan American Airways of regular airplane passenger service to Europe.

Our landing here in American waters concluded eight days of the fastest non-stop flying in history and returned to the United States six of the 16 newspaper correspondents and radio representatives who left aboard the Clipper Saturday afternoon, June 17. A lucky seventh hitch-hiked with us from Marseilles. The others remained abroad for vacations.

DAILY DOZEN

(From the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania)

The first five years are the hardest.

That is the story of marriage. Thirty-five per cent of divorces occur before the fifth wedding anniversary.

There are 164 divorces in this country to every 1,000 marriages. In England there are but 12 for every 1,000 marriages.

Easy state laws make many divorces possible. There are compensations in all things, however.

Marriages, disrupted soon after, are often childless ones. Broken hearts may heal and recover.

Families torn asunder are never made whole again.

The tragic victims of divorce are the children.

In early divorces—there are fewer children involved.

"FASHIONS FOR MEN"

Alice Fay Is Becoming
Near To Social HermitBy MILTON HARKER
(International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD, June 26.—Alice
Faye has become a social hermit.
She admits she "just can't take it any more."For the past five weeks, since she started "Hollywood Cavalcade", she has been going to bed before 9 p. m., politely rejecting all the innumerable invitations with which top-flight screen stars are beset."I have been out only twice, quiet dinners with friends, since I started this picture and even then I was to bed early," Alice revealed today."When I first came to Hollywood, a little over five years ago, I could keep going all the time and still feel fine. I could stay out late and get up early to make pictures, but I can't any more. I can't seem to take it like I used to be able to do.""I'll admit to you very frankly that when I was making 'Rose of Washington Square' I was sick. I felt badly all through the picture and I knew I would have to do something. The trip I took to New York and back via the Panama Canal put me on my feet.""All during this picture I've felt fine. That's because I'm getting plenty of sleep and rest. You see, after I finish this one, I'll probably have only two weeks before I go into 'Lillian Russell', the picture I've always wanted to make more than any other.""They say you've got to learn by experience. I've learned my lessonand believe me, from now on, I'm not going to wear myself out. It just gets you down to no purpose."Alice has just been re-joined by husband Tony Martin, back in town after a personal appearance tour in which he was given tumultuous receptions all over the country."We have made no plans to do anything, even for our wedding anniversary in September," Alice said.
"I am tied up with pictures and Tony's plans are uncertain. We don't know yet whether he is going back in pictures or going out on tour again with his orchestra.""We'll just have to wait and see and hope for the best."Dorothy Arnold, beautiful fiancée of Joe Di Maggio, New York Yankee star, can't wait to get finished in "Sandy Takes A Bow" at Universal.
She'll be on her way to Gotham to see Joe. She'll stay around for the all-star game.Date of the wedding remains uncertain, she assures her reporter.
"Things are too unsettled yet to make any definite plans."

THE NEWS, BY MAIL, 1 YEAR, $5.Seek Running Mate
For Roosevelt If He Runs For Third TermBy WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff
CorrespondentWASHINGTON, June 26.—Eager to retire Vice President Garner next year, the New Deal's "palace guard" has sounded out a few prominent Democrats on the question of running for second place on a third-term ticket with President Roosevelt in 1940, it was learned today.Attorney General Frank Murphy of Michigan, and Senator Burton
K. Wheeler of Montana, among others, have been "invited" by "guard" leaders to run with the president.
Both rejected the overtures in terms of finality.The "insiders," who made the overtures, conceded they were not acting under instructions from the president but indicated he knew what they were doing. Althoughthey acted apparently on their own initiative, the overtures lent weight to current rumors Mr. Roosevelt will seek a third term in 1940.Murphy revealed his attitude in a recent press conference when he said it would be a "mistake" if he were nominated for the vice presidency on a ticket headed by the president. To intimates, Murphy has disclosed he believes his reluctance—he is a Catholic—would handicap the Democratic ticket by injecting an issue into the 1940 campaign unrelated to the record of the Roosevelt administration or a third term.Wheeler was said to have turned down the overtures on the ground he prefers to remain in the senate, rather than preside over it. Wheeler's present term expires in January, 1941, and he will be a candidate for re-election to the senate next year.West Pittsburg Mission PicnicWest Pittsburg Baptist Mission

noon. There was a splendid attendance and a splendid time was

Galento-Louis Meet Wednesday

Two-Ton Tony Galento Will Try To Wrest Heavy-weight Crown From Bomber

RECALL LOUIS AND PAULINO BATTLE

By BILL CORUM
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 26.—Dominick Anthony Galento fights Joe Louis in the Yankee stadium Wednesday night. That's just like the fat men's team playing the Yankees. Only no picnic goes with it. Not, at any rate, for Dominick.

But tell me, sweethearts, in our position whom would you pick? Some say Louis will not be able to punch so effectively in this fight because he will have to hit down at the shorter Galento. Perhaps that will be true. The nearest to a man of today's stature that I can recall Joe fighting was Paulino Uzcudun.

Old "turtle back" was low and squat, though he did not boast quite so much embonpoint, if Galento will excuse my lapsing into the vernacular.

Paulino Kayeod I am not likely to forget the moment that the shuffler found an opening in Paulino's head-and-elbows defense. Old Uz, his back to the ropes, was facing almost directly toward me across the Garden ring, when for the briefest of moments his vigilance seemed to desert him.

His arms dropped and his head came up instead of going down inside its shell. Louis was at him like a cat, his fist driving through the opening the instant it appeared.

It was, I think, the flustiest, most terrifying punch I have ever seen struck. It landed squarely on Paulino's mouth and his whole face seemed to fall apart, like a cross-word puzzle face in which the features were being scattered. Then he pitched forward and out.

As summer wears on... politicians will wear you out. Every day sees one more enter the race for this or that. We hear that some mighty fine men will enter into the running of things this election. That's fine, we sure need a change. But we must not lose sight of the fact that a politician can be too fine. Fine enough to slip through the fingers of the law. Let's listen to all stories and statements and then weigh them all carefully... and let our good honest judgment be our guide.
This week-end will be a bright star in the crown of the Pennsylvania Power Company's Cap. Their three million dollar plant will be opened for public inspection. And what an inspection it will be... if you miss this event, then you are surely neglecting your education. This opening caps the idea we have had and have been wanting to say for some time... "Local boy makes good" and right here in his home town. There is no place like New Castle.
It's swimming weather and all those who can swim are taking their turn. But again we wish to caution swimmers about swimming in ye old swimming hole. It might look fine from the bank... but be sure it is fine before you dive. A human life cannot be replaced and so many times one is lost just because someone was careless... let's not have any river or water losses in New Castle this summer. We need every citizen in this community.

A human life cannot be replaced and so many times one is lost just because someone was careless... let's not have any river or water losses in New Castle this summer. As summer wears on... politicians will wear you out. Every day sees one more enter the race for this or that. We hear that some mighty fine men will enter into the running of things this election. That's fine, we sure need a change. But we must not lose sight of the fact that a politician can be too fine. Fine enough to slip through the fingers of the law. Let's listen to all stories and statements and then weigh them all carefully... and let our good honest judgment be our guide.
This week-end will be a bright star in the crown of the Pennsylvania Power Company's Cap. Their three million dollar plant will be opened for public inspection. And what an inspection it will be... if you miss this event, then you are surely neglecting your education. This opening caps the idea we have had and have been wanting to say for some time... "Local boy makes good" and right here in his home town. There is no place like New Castle.

Charge Five With Applying Coat Of Tar And Feathers

Washington Columnist Is Victim Of Attack Over Week End

(International News Service)
WARRENTON, Va., June 26—Virginia's famed horse-show district was divided into two camps today as a result of the tarring and feathering of Count Icar Cassini, 24, Washington newspaper columnist, by five men early Sunday.
On one side were aligned friends of Ian and Colin Montgomery, brothers, and Alexander Calvert, for whom Cassini swore out warrants charging them with kidnapping him from a country club dance to beat him, then administer the tar-and-feather coating.
On the other side were friends of the young writer, son of a former Russian family high in diplomatic circles in Washington.
The Montgomery brothers—Ian is 38, Colin 28—and Calvert, 21, are sons of families prominent in Virginia and Maryland country club and society life.
Under the charges, on which they are scheduled to be arraigned before Justice D. R. Glascock on Wednesday, they would be subject to mandatory sentences of one to ten years in prison if convicted. The warrants charge feloniously constituting a mob, and assault and battery, the former a charge made possible under a new Virginia state law.
None of the men had been apprehended early today, but officers expressed no doubt but that they would appear for the arraignment Wednesday, with bail readily available should they be held to the grand jury.
Cassini, whose gossip column, "Pettit Point," in the Washington Times and Herald, has been devoted chiefly to the doings of the society and "horse" folk set of Maryland and Virginia, planned to return to Washington during the day to resume his daily column.

Garner Predicts Lower Income Tax Bracket Shortly

Thinks Exemptions For Married Men Will Be $1,200 And $500 For Single Persons

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 26—Vice-president Garner has predicted to friends that income tax exemptions in a year or two will be lowered to $1,200 for married persons and $500 for single persons.

Moreover, the white-haired Texan isn't sure but what this would do the country good. It will make voters realize the cost of government, he has told his friends.

Possibly, Garner believes, it may even result in such pressure from the citizenry that government expenditures will be drastically curtailed.

Do You Remember?

Compiled And Presented For Publication In The News By Old Timer's Day Association

Anything about the early history of New Castle, and of the men and women who first settled here, was when Lawrence county had not sprung into existence, but was a part of Mercer and Beaver counties. The object of this column is to give our readers some information concerning the transition which has taken place since the first pioneers settled here in 1798, when this section was a virgin wilderness inhabited by Indians. How the settlement has grown, until New Castle is now a flourishing city of 50,000 people. Information of this sort should be of interest not only to the descendants of old timers, but to the community at large. It is a part of our community life.

The history of New Castle dates back to the early part of the year 1798; but before the white man trod the hills and valleys of western Pennsylvania, before even the restless and adventurous pioneers and couriers of the English and French colonies had begun to make their appearance here, the American Indians had for unknown ages occupied the soil and followed the wild and untamed pursuits of barbarian life—the chase and the war path.

On the ground where New Castle now stands, a powerful Chief, or "King," of the Delaware, or, as the lands they were in search of, but passed by the large and went as far as Youngstown. Becoming dissatisfied, some returned to Allegheny, and about seventeen persons returned to Pennsylvania and settled on both sides of the Mahoning river?
